

Grammar and Punctuation, two of these best-selling SkillBuilders, use a standardized test format to deliver key instruction. Sentences appear on three lines and students must identify which line contains an error. In Parts of Speech, students use the mouse to find the correct parts of speech they are currently studying. Students or teachers can select several different instructional options including an introductory tutorial, practice with help, or a testing mode. Students who achieve mastery level performance, determined by the teacher, may play a motivating and fun reward game. Teachers have easy access to management information and to pre- and post-tests. Thousands of schools use these programs to teach and reinforce critical grammar skills assessed on standardized tests. Shouldn't you?
