

A helpful dog named Shakespeare guides students through a variety of interesting outdoor activities that are full of animation, music, and voice. Students focus on defined reading and writing skills as they work through each phase, including "Learn" where students receive instruction on the concepts before moving to the "Do" where they practice for themselves. Many concepts also have an "Explore" mode where students can further expand their skills.

your book to school? in the lake.

Sentence structure and style are the focus of these activities, incorporating word patterns and sentence types.

PUNCTUATION

Space Trip

Click on the word you think needs an apostrophe to show possession.

Her brother's boat sailed across the pond.

Tremendous!

In these activities, students learn about various types of punctuation such as periods, commas, apostrophes, and much more.

WRITING & EDITING

Newspaper Editor

Listen to the two stories. Then move the title to the correct story.

Pet Found

A cat named 'Buzzsaw' was finally found close to his home by neighbors. He had run away several days ago but, aside from being a little hungry, is in good shape.

An iguana is a pet with strange and unusual features. For example, iguanas can store fat under their jaws when food is hard to find. "It is challenging to own an iguana," says Quinn, "but it is still a lot of fun."

Students identify the topic and main idea, then compose and edit sentences and stories using grammar, usage, and mechanical conventions.
